Secret d'Atelier parquet flooring collection

Secret d'Atelier

Depuis 1958 - Paris

The Parisian studio: Secret d'Atelier has recently created a range of lacquered parquet flooring that references the hues, featured in Le Corbusier's book on color theory.

La Polychromie Architecturale is based on the French-Swiss architect's design guide that incidently has the same name. Created in the 1930s, the book shows how color can affect spaces and moods and offers palettes and combinations to trigger different effects.

According to the designers, the collection is a "tribute" to the architect, who is widely recognized for his 20th-century modernist buildings.

It includes a palette of 11 shades –natural, black, ivory, sienna, green, orange, red, blue, and three shades of grey – selected from the French architect's original 63 colours, which Le Corbusier released in two parts in 1931 and 1959.

Users can combine these colors with other colors taken directly from the architect's Polychromie Architecturale palettes, which are licensed by Les Couleurs Le Corbusier. "Secret d'Atelier is the only flooring company to be able to develop this remarkable colour palette," according to the Parisian company.
