Casa REX by Felipe Gonzalez Arzac

The cantilevered concrete volume that tops this minimal home in La Plata, Argentina, was designed by architect Felipe Gonzalez Arzac to look as if it is "suspended in the air". Casa REX is a three-bedroom residence that the Argentinian architect designed for a family in the neighbourhood of City Bell. It forms part of a residential area in La Plata – a relatively new city known for its orthogonal street grid.

The two-story home occupies a corner lot in the suburban neighborhood of City Bell, and encompasses 230 square metres. Towards the back of the home, a multi-purpose space with a grill can be used for hosting larger gatherings. These spaces are connected from the interior, but also face the pool in the centre of the L-shaped plan.
