Guam dance floors are off limits

Your dancing shoes will be collecting some dust for a while according to the Guam Pacific Daily News. Readers who remember the 1982 movie: Footloose, may recall it was about a local town that advised against dancing.

But, unlike the movie, this is real. Island visitors and everyone else are all being advised against taking to the dance floor.

For the purpose of ensuring public safety, The Department of Public Health and Social Services has recently released its official guidance for eating and drinking establishments, which actually include Island bars and taverns, under Pandemic Condition of Readiness 3. This official guidance took effect Wednesday, February 23, 2021.

This action was timed less than eight hours before bars and taverns on the island could reopen on Wednesday evening. This guidance is a precaution after an extended mandatory closure of these types of establishments since August 2020, due to the spike in COVID-19 cases.
