Italian design firm Lazzarini has ambitious aspirations. They're eager to build a vessel that looks like a floating city at a prohibitive cost of eight billion dollars, which bears a striking resemblance to a lair in a James Bond Movie. Pangeos would be sizeable terayacht with ample space for year-round residences, hotels, malls, parks and even ports for smaller ships and aircrafts.

The proposed vessel would actually be powered by clean sources of energy: rooftop solar panels and hydro-energy; that is harnessed from ocean waves.

Getting started on the project would require considerable space. Actually, one kilometer of sea would need to be dredged to start building this super vessel. Designers are considering Saudi Arabia, as a potential location for the project.
